

Hackney Solidarity

More details and comments on both these issues in the next issue of Hackney Solidarity.
www.workersliberty.org/haringeyhackney
www.workersliberty.org/hackneysolidarity
Phone 07957-217639 to make sure you get your copy.

Save Hackney Schools

Local school Homerton College of Technology faces the chop as academy-mania grips the borough's Learning Trust.

The Trust is 'consulting' on the school's future, but has made it clear that it thinks that the only real option to close Homerton and replace it with an 'academy'.

Hackney already has one academy - Mossbourne - and will soon have two more - Petchey and Bridge. Now the Learning Trust wants a fourth.

An academy is founded when a rich sponsor puts up around £2m and the government adds around £25m. The rich sponsor then gets to control major aspects of the school, with precious little accountability to parents, kids, staff or the community.

At a recent public meeting organised by the school's trade unions, a hundred people protested against the closure plan - and against a proposal to make Haggerston School mixed-sex to prepare it for yet another academy.

CONTACT THE CAMPAIGN:

Hackney Teachers' Association (NUT), 020-8985-6606

www.workersliberty.org/academies

Round One to the Residents

Residents of Aspland estate and Marcon Court have forced Hackney Council to back down from its plan to privatise their estates.

The Council's Cabinet will discuss the issue on 25 July, and was going to vote on a recommendation to transfer the estates to a new landlord, to demolish Marcon Court and rebuild it with a majority of private flats for sale.

Now, the recommendation will instead be to note residents' opposition, pull the estates out of the 'Review', and put them into the Decent Homes programme with the rest of Hackney's estates.

The Tenants' & Residents' Association (TRA) has vowed to fight on, to ensure that the Council properly refurbishes the crumbling estate.

Hackney Solidarity's Janine Booth, who is TRA Chairperson, said: "This is a victory for community solidarity. We stopped the privatisation plan because we were not fooled by Council propaganda, and were not prepared to see a working-class community swept aside to make way for yet more expensive flats for City commuters."

www.workersliberty.org/marconcourt

Hackney Solidarity

More details and comments on both these issues in the next issue of Hackney Solidarity.
www.workersliberty.org/haringeyhackney
www.workersliberty.org/hackneysolidarity
Phone 07957-217639 to make sure you get your copy.

Save Hackney Schools

Local school Homerton College of Technology faces the chop as academy-mania grips the borough's Learning Trust.

The Trust is 'consulting' on the school's future, but has made it clear that it thinks that the only real option to close Homerton and replace it with an 'academy'.

Hackney already has one academy - Mossbourne - and will soon have two more - Petchey and Bridge. Now the Learning Trust wants a fourth.

An academy is founded when a rich sponsor puts up around £2m and the government adds around £25m. The rich sponsor then gets to control major aspects of the school, with precious little accountability to parents, kids, staff or the community.

At a recent public meeting organised by the school's trade unions, a hundred people protested against the closure plan - and against a proposal to make Haggerston School mixed-sex to prepare it for yet another academy.

CONTACT THE CAMPAIGN:

Hackney Teachers' Association (NUT), 020-8985-6606

www.workersliberty.org/academies

Round One to the Residents

Residents of Aspland estate and Marcon Court have forced Hackney Council to back down from its plan to privatise their estates.

The Council's Cabinet will discuss the issue on 25 July, and was going to vote on a recommendation to transfer the estates to a new landlord, to demolish Marcon Court and rebuild it with a majority of private flats for sale.

Now, the recommendation will instead be to note residents' opposition, pull the estates out of the 'Review', and put them into the Decent Homes programme with the rest of Hackney's estates.

The Tenants' & Residents' Association (TRA) has vowed to fight on, to ensure that the Council properly refurbishes the crumbling estate.

Hackney Solidarity's Janine Booth, who is TRA Chairperson, said: "This is a victory for community solidarity. We stopped the privatisation plan because we were not fooled by Council propaganda, and were not prepared to see a working-class community swept aside to make way for yet more expensive flats for City commuters."

www.workersliberty.org/marconcourt